Charlie Herzog and Not Connie Mack Discovered Slugger Baker

Carl Morris's Backer Cleans Up a Million in Oil—Boxing and Wrestling to Be Added to Olympics.

THE story of how Baker, the great slugger of the world's series, and Herzog, the rival third baseman in that series, have always been associated since they were nothing more than mere kids, is a remarkable one. If the question was asked, "Who found this brilliant slugger and infielder, Baker?" the answer would be in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, "Connie Mack." It is true Connie took Baker when he was an infant and polished him into one of the most brilliant jewels on his star combination. But who found the rough stone? Who gave the rough stone the first chance to develop?

The answer to this question is no other than Charlie Herzog, the third baseman on the Giants. Back in 1903, Herzog managed an independent team in the Cumberland valley. Charlie was always a financier, and never slipped up on a money proposition. He had played with Baker, when they were younger, and Baker signed up with him as pitcher. Now comes the part that Herzog had in developing for Connie Mack, one of the best third-basemen the country has ever known. "How'd you like to try the infield?" asked Herzog one day, and Baker replied that it suited him to a tee, and from that time on Baker became Herzog's third baseman. He could hit them a mile.

When Connie took his team down south in the spring of 1905, the ac-

DECLARATION OF WAR PIGEONHOLED

National League Declines to Act Upon American League's Resolution

New York, N. Y., Dec. 15.—The American league's "declaration of war" has been pigeon-holed for at least two months, and probably for all time by the National league.

It was not even seriously considered, president Lynch said at the close of the session. None of the magnates would decipher its purport, so they tabled it.

In the final session of the three-day meeting, the National league adopted two resolutions, one calling upon the states and cities on the circuit to make ticket scalping punishable by fine and imprisonment; the other declaring war on baseball pools and offering $100 reward for the conviction of persons gambling on the games.

The organization also vested president Lynch with power to act for it in dealing with the request of the three principal minor leagues for higher classification.

James McGill, the owner of the Denver pennant winning baseball club, has decided that the Boston Nationals want more sponducks than the Denver club, so he is turning his ownership thoughts elsewhere. He wanted the Los Angeles or the Vernon club, but neither of these are on the market, so he has decided to choose some other desirable investment and the eastern league seems his only hope.

In reviewing the recent horse show in Little Old New York, Lord Davies says some very nice things about our horses. Besides praising American horses in general, he says our hunters and cross country riders are superior to those exhibited on the other side of the pond. He particularly admires our jumpers and says that out of 60 every 40 can make the jump successfully. Besides these and a lot of other bouquets, he winds up by saying that if he were not an Englishman, he would be tempted to state that the American horse show is 25 percent the superior of the English article.

VACANT LOTS MADE 'FLOWER GARDENS'

How Civic Attractiveness Is Enhanced by Utilizing Waste Ground

Washington, D. C., Dec. 15.—Civic, economic and social benefits were derived at Minneapolis from the "garden club" campaign, carried on there during the past season for the purpose of having all the city's vacant lots turned into flower and vegetable beds, according to Leroy J. Boughner, of Minneapolis, who told the American Civic association in convention here today of the "vacant lot garden" work done in his home city.

It was a matter of civic pride, not an economic motive, which early last spring started the garden idea, Mr. Boughner explained. A civic celebration was to be held early in July, he said, "so we decided to have gardens to beautify the city for its 100,000 visitors." The fact that there were 4000 acres of vacant lots in the city, "sufficient to supply the entire state with vegetables," was not enough appeal to get the appeal to plant 2,000,000 square feet to vegetables and 250,000 to flowers, said the speaker.

Mr. Boughner held Minneapolis up as a model for other cities, pointing out in detail how the vacant lots there had been transformed into lawns of flowers and vegetable beauty, and called attention to some of the mistakes which had been made. So successful was this year's garden club campaign, however, that it will be continued with renewed vigor, Mr. Boughner declared, during the coming year.
